PREFACE

The Genealogical Committee of the "Day Association" would submit some of the causes which have retarded the progress of their work very much beyond the time contemplated for its publication. Indeed if the amount of labor necessary to complete the task had been realized, it is very doubtful if this second edition would have appeared.

Inexperience and a lack of knowledge of the extent of the work we had attempted to do has had its effect in postponing the date of its completion.

Sickness in three of the families of the committee has also added delay.

Some few of our relatives have not responded promptly to our solicitations for their family records, while occasionally one has withheld his or her knowledge of the matter entirely.

We expect these apparently uninterested to be among our most severe critics; yet we have almost invariably been very cordially assisted, and the kind aid and encouraging words of many highly esteemed friends, merit appreciation and commendation, and largely account for what appears in this volume.

If this work had been undertaken fifty years earlier it would have been more easily and more completely accomplished at that time, but we are rewarded with much of interest since then.

We are creditably informed that many years ago, two families by the name of "Day" came to this country from England. The descendants of one of these, comprising a large family, were at one time located in Georgetown, now Phippsburg, Me.

Professor George Edward Day, L.L.D., of Yale University confirms this by saying, that "The Days came to Cape Ann from England, one branch went West, the other East."

From Genealogical History we are led to believe that Anthony
Day, who came to this country from London, England on the ship "Paul" in 1635, and later located in Gloucester, Mass., was the progenitor of the Day branch coming East and to which we belong.

It is evident that Jacob Day of the fifth generation of Anthony Day was of the branch here referred to. His family consisted of thirteen children, eight sons and five daughters, of these five sons and three daughters were among the very early settlers of Leeds, Me.

Some of them located there before the Town was incorporated. About this time William A. Day settled on a large tract of land about two miles from Leeds Center. Here he reared a large family. Among their descendants were Horace C. Day, present cashier of the First National Bank of Auburn, Me., and Holman F. Day, the Poetic Author.

Thus far we have been unable to connect the descendants of William A. Day with those of Jacob Day, though they came to Leeds, Me., about the same time, and we would naturally infer that they might be at least distantly related.

In religious faith it has been said that many of our early race were either believers in the Church of England or Quakers. In occupation, sea-faring men, fishermen or hunters.
ORIGIN OF THE NAME OF DAY

From facts gathered at the Genealogical rooms at Boston, Mass., appears the following:

All records and traditions agree in this assertion: that the Day family originated from the Dees, who inhabited the banks of a river given their name in Wales.

In a book of Heraldry, containing the arms of William Day, B.D., Provost of Eaton College and Dean of Windsor, confirmed by William Flower, on Oct. 21, 1582, in the twenty-fourth year of Queen Elizabeth's reign, he is said to have descended from the Dees of Wales, viz., being youngest son of Richard Day, who was son of Nicholas Day the son of John Dee.

In the change of language, Dee came to be D-A-Y-E. Later the final E was dropped, and we have the present D-A-Y.
HISTORICAL

Following is a list in the early years of our Colony, gathered from the Genealogical Rooms of Boston, Mass.:

Robert Day of Ipswich, Mass., arrived in 1635.
Nathaniel Day of Ipswich, Mass., arrived in 1637.
Stephen Day of Cambridge, Mass., who is thought to have been the first Printer in this country, died Dec., 1668, aged 58 years.
Wentworth Day of Boston, Mass.
Ralph Day of Dedham, Mass., whose descendants are found in Wrentham, and Attleboro, Mass., also Killingly, Conn.
Anthony Day of Gloucester, Mass.
John Day of Boston, Mass., 1677 (Merchant).
William Day of Boston, Mass., 1669 (Mariner).

H. Turner, Lynn, Mass.; Mrs. E. A. Hall, North Attleboro, Mass.;
B. D. Gilbert, Brockton, Mass.; J. G. Elder, Lewiston, Me.; Mrs. Dora
Ray, Greenbrier, Canada; Mrs. S. L. Johnson, McKinley, Minn., Mrs. R. L. Ford, Boulder, Montana, and Mrs. W. E. Elder, Auburn, Me.

The "Day Association" was organized at Wesley, Me., in Aug., 1900, under the influence of Rev. Hiram F. Day, since which time the Association has held its "Reunions" annually, having since published, in pamphlet form, a genealogy of the descendants of the Samuel Blethen Day family and of the Jacob Day family; two of the branches in the sixth generation of Anthony Day, who was the American progenitor of our race and whom we regard as of the first generation.
This little work is included in a revised and extended form in our new genealogy.

The object of this whole work is to prevent the knowledge of those kindred ties, that once did, and now do cement, heart to heart, from fading so fast from the minds of all living, whose names are herein recorded. It is to catch and arrest those facts in genealogy which were rapidly hastening to the silence of everlasting forgetfulness.

It is to present before the present and coming generation, those interesting facts, e'er the waves of time carry them into oblivion, from whence by all human efforts, they can never be recalled.

X—Samuel Blethen Day, Jr.\(^{7}\), b. in Leeds, Me., June 2, 1818; m. in Wesley, Me., March 26, 1849, Ann Richardson, daughter of Josiah
   Richardson and Nellie Coucher, b. in Musquodoboit, N. S., Oct.
   30, 1814. He came to Wesley in 1835. A Farmer. Owing to a fall from the beams of the barn, was deformed, and though small in stature was still a powerful man. By both old and young he was known as “Uncle Sam,” and always had a pleasant word and kindly smile for all. He was particularly fond of children and young people, and for them would tell many an interesting story of early days. He served as Private in the “Aroostook War” of 1838-9. He seemed to have almost the power of foretelling events. As an illustration of this we write the following:
   He and his nephew, Elias Day, were one day talking on various subjects. Elias who owned a wagon with leather straps, extending from rear axle to forward rocker, and was held and tightened there with bolts (these straps allowing the wagon to rock a little), called his attention to it, and remarked, “Uncle Sam, that’s a pretty nice wagon.” “Yes,” Uncle Sam replied,
   “but you will see that they will have them much better soon.
   They will have steel springs.” Some years later Elias heard that Lucius Munson of Cooper, Me., had bought a wagon with steel springs, called an “Elliptic Spring Wagon,” and he was going over to see it, as it seemed such a curious thing to think of a wagon with steel springs. He went to see it, and hired the wagon to ride to Calais in. He was the first one in Wesley to ride in a "steel spring wagon." Elias came home and was telling "Uncle Sam" about it, and he said, "Every one will have one soon, they'll have to have them."

Some years later after spring wagons had come into general use, he was again talking with Elias, and he said, "Yes, these things are wonderful, but it's nothing to what you will see. They will go right along this very road where we stand, in wagons without horses or oxen hitched to them." Elias laughed skeptically, and pointing to a very large and steep hill known all through that section as the "Day Hill," said, "They couldn't get up there, the wheels would slip around." "I don't know how they will work it," Uncle Sam replied. "I think they will have cogs of some kind in the wheels."

Elias made considerable fun of "Uncle Sam's" predicted method of locomotion, which seemed to nettles him somewhat, and he very earnestly remarked, "Elias, some day they'll go through the air." "Why," said Elias, "you don't mean that they'll go through the air in a wagon?" "No, it won't be in a wagon, but in some kind of a machine that will scale through the air." "What makes you think so, Uncle Sam?" "It will be so because it reads so in the Bible. 'Knowledge shall be increased' (Dan. 12: 4)." Long before the automobile came in the land, and years before the flying machine was an assured thing, "Uncle Sam" was laid away to rest, firm in the faith that some day he should live again at the resurrection, which had been his hope and consolation for years. He and his wife were both Adventists. He d. in Yarmouth, Me., Sept. 6, 1893. She d. in Wesley, Me., May 19, 1890.

c—Benjamin Francis Turner\(^2\), by the death of his father, William Erastus Turner\(^3\), was left an orphan at an early age. Later with his widowed mother he moved to Cambridge, Me., and found a home in the family of Deacon Charles Hamm. While here in a Christian home the ideals of a true Christian manhood began to appeal to his active responsive mind. Making good use of the local means of securing a rudimentary education, fitted himself for college and graduated with honor from Colby College, Waterville, Me., July 2, 1884, and later from the Baptist Theological Seminary of Newton Center, Mass. In all the years of preparation for his life work he relied upon his own resources. He was ordained to the Christian Ministry at North Middleboro, Mass., and served the Baptist Church in that place while completing his Theological course of study.

In 1887, with his wife, he sailed for Tavoy, Burma, as a Missionary. The shattered health of his wife compelled their return after a little more than two years to his native land. For more than a score of years he served the churches of Maine in numerous pastorates. He was a man of worthy ideals, of tireless activity, of high devotion, in short of Christian heroism. His death occurred at Head Harbor Island just off the coast of Jonesport, Me., where he had gone in the summer of 1913, hoping to regain his failing health.

His wife writes of him: "I bury him here on a Maine seacoast mission field. It is a fitting close to a busy, useful life. He has fought a good fight and finished his course."

At that time means of transportation were extremely limited, and he was confined to the following itineracy, viz.: Steamboat from Machias to Boston; by rail from Boston to Albany; New York canal boat from Albany to Buffalo; steamboat from Buffalo to Toledo, O.; by rail from Toledo to Chicago; by stage from Chicago to Galena, Ill.; by steamboat from Galena to St. Paul, Minn. On this trip up the Mississippi the boat was fired on by the Indians. Mr. Hanscom acquired by pre-emption one hundred and sixty acres of land located on Minnehaha Creek, then in the heart of the Chippewa Indian district, now a part of the City of Minneapolis. He and John Wesley Day were close companions in the Indian War with the tribe under the leadership of the famous chief, Little Crow. In one engagement, their horses were injured by the bullets from the rifles of the Indians, on another occasion one of their logging camps was attacked and two men killed by the Indians. In 1876 William Day with his wife, Lucy Ann (Thompson) Day, and nearly all of that branch of the Day family emigrated to this same country. Mr. Hanscom having married William Day's youngest daughter, Caroline Eastman, made a home for her parents, where they were kindly and faithfully cared for during their latter days. He met death by accident in Anoka, Minn., Jan. 27, 1863.

DEATH OF MRS. NELLIE BLOOM

The many friends in Sacramento of Mrs. Nellie Bloom will be pained to learn of the death of that estimable and accomplished lady. For many years the readers of the Record-Union have been favored with charming bits of verse from her pen, many of which displayed poetic genius of the true order.

Mrs. Bloom leaves a husband and two sons in San Francisco, and two sisters in Sacramento—Mrs. F. C. Elworthy and Mrs. J. R. Hall.

—The Record-Union, Sacramento, Cal., October 7, 1900.

A REVERIE

BY MRS. NELLIE BLOOM

Could I but search the deep unknown,
And find out all its mysteries—
If, from that knowledge I might learn
That death brings only happiness,
How gladly I would yield up life,
And seek the rest I long to find—
How gladly I would leave the strife,
That earth vouchsafes to all mankind.

Ofttimes when evening shadows fling
Their mantle round me in the gathering gloom,
With silent awe I gaze upon the star-gemmed heavens,
And ask myself what lies beyond;
And, if among the clouds that pass before my sight
A rift appears, it seems to me
An open door that leads to paradise—
Ah! could we only see!

This earthly life with all its ceaseless care,
Seems but a vague, uncertain dream,
That comes to haunt me like a memory of the past,
Wherein once shone bright golden gleams
Of sunshine; but now dark clouds obscure the sky,
While hope and joy for me have long since fled—
A heart grown sad with grief can never happy be—
We never can recall a day that's dead.

But why should I repine? why murmur o'er the fate
That destiny hath long designed for me?
By each and all life's lessons must be learned,
For such is God's decree;
Then falter not, faint heart! nor let thy courage fail,
E'en though thy way through life be marked with tears—
Tho' faith and hope and trust come not again,
Let duty be thy guide through coming years.

West Oakland, May 11, 1887.
THE WRECK
BY MRS. NELLIE BLOOM

It was midnight on the water,
And the darkness was intense,
Moon and stars alike were hidden
In the murky firmament;
While the storm raged o'er the billow,
Lashing sea to whitest foam,
And the vivid lightning flashes
On a ship dismantled shown.

She who once had sailed so proudly
O'er the ocean's crested wave
Bent before the storm-king's fury,
Powerless herself to save.
And the manly forms that gathered
On the vessel's heaving deck
Knew the coming morn would witness
Tearful scenes of fearful wreck.

They could only look to heaven
For the aid man could not give;
Human help was helpless to them—
In that sea no boat could live;
Surging waters all around them,
Jagged rocks, all towering high,
Left them scarce a hope of rescue
From some chance ship passing by.

Slowly passed the fearful hours,
As they vanished one by one,
While across the waste of waters
Boomed the solemn signal gun;
It would tell a tale of anguish,
Of a ship in dire distress;
But the echo only answered,
Bringing with it hopelessness.

Daylight broke upon the water
Lighting up the dismal scene
Hardy hearts were filled with sadness
At the sight that it revealed.
Where were they who faced the danger
On the vessel's heaving deck?
Ask the waves that roll above them—
Waves that swept them from the wreck.
Few were left to tell the story
Of the perils of the night;
Of the hardships they endured,
Ere the stanch ship hove in sight
That should rescue them from danger,
Save them from a watery grave;
For the prayers sent up to heaven
Had been answered—they were saved.

West Oakland, December 26, 1887.

OUR FALLEN BRAVE
BY J. R. MAINS

When treason rear'd its hydra head,
And trampled in the dust,
'Neath Sumpter's grim and batter'd walls
Our flag, the Freeman's trust,
The call went forth o'er sea and land,
Where hearts were true and brave,
To rescue from that traitor band
The flag our fathers gave.

From East to West, brave, gallant hearts,
Obey'd their country's call,
Resolved to save that dear old flag
Or 'neath its folds to fall!
Behold them on the blood-stained field
Contending for the right,
'Mid cannon's smoke and flashing steel
Their banners gleaming bright.

At Fair Oaks many a hero fell,
And by Rappahannock's tide;
At Antietam and Gain's Mill,
And the James' stream beside,
Where the Tennessee glides smooth along
Its course unto the sea,
They calmly rest its graves among
On hillside, bank and lea.

But not in vain these heroes fell,
On Southern shore and wave,
A nation's future praise shall tell
Where fought and fell the brave;
Inscrib'd upon historic page,
In ages yet to come,
Their deeds shall live who died to save
The flag our fathers won.
Fight on, fight on, brave, gallant hearts,
   Strike down the foe who'd dare
Erase from out its glorious folds
   One star now shining there.
For shall it e'er in peace be furl'd
   While o'er the Southern wave
Is heard the clanking of the chains
   That bind in bonds the slave.

Weep not, fond mother, for thy son,
   For he is happy now,
The fame that crown'd a Washington
   Encircles now his brow;
He died in Freedom's glorious cause,
   His life-blood freely gave,
To save the Union and its laws—
   God bless our fallen brave!
